WELLNESS TIP OF THE WEEK
Brought to you by HealthSource of Wicker Park
Water is a component of every cell, tissue and system in our body. It helps protect and lubricate brain, spine and joints, keeps tissues from getting sticky and helps them slide against each other, removes toxins, and carries nutrients through the body and helps maintain body temperature and a healthy weight. While the daily requirements vary from person to person, a commonly used amount is \( \frac{1}{2} \) a person's body weight in ounces. So a 150 pound person would require 75 oz. or almost 5-16 oz. bottles a day.
